Of the Lamont clan's trio of dining rooms, it's the one in East Perth, sitting pertly on the banks of Claisebrook Inlet, that shines most brightly. Dine here on a sunny day and it's all about the ambience. Boats with price tags higher than a Potts Point apartment jostle in their pens. A gondola floats by. The Burswood Resort complex hunkers down on the horizon. Take your seat and, within seconds, a bowl of olives and good bread appears. Chef Nathan Le produces careful, tasty fare that deserves its fine reputation. Apple blini with smoked duck breast, foie gras and pomegranate hit all the right notes, while an entrée of brioche baked figs with truffled honey and watercress raises the flag for local produce. Local marron is always on the menu, cooked in a variety of ways. The wine list is good, too: the Lamont's range is fully represented, but other vineyards also get a look-in.
